Shaped by cartoons and museum dioramas, our vision of Paleolithic times tends to feature fur-clad male hunters fearlessly attacking mammoths while timid women hover fearfully behind a boulder. Recent archaeological research has shown that this vision bears little relation to reality. J. M. Adovasio and Olga Soffer, two of the world's leading experts on perishable artifacts such as basketry, cordage, and weaving, present an exciting new look at prehistory. With science writer Jake Page, they argue that women invented all kinds of critical materials, including the clothing necessary for life in colder climates, the ropes used to make rafts that enabled long-distance travel by water, and nets used for communal hunting. Even more important, women played a central role in the development of language and social life?in short, in our becoming human. In this eye-opening book, a new story about women in prehistory emerges with provocative implications for our assumptions about gender today.

Jacqueline Carter:

As a pupil exactly feel bored in order to reading. If their teacher questioned them to go to the library or make summary for some guide, they are complained. Just tiny students that has reading's heart or real their interest. They just do what the teacher want, like asked to go to the library. They go to right now there but nothing reading critically. Any students feel that reading is not important, boring and can't see colorful photos on there. Yeah, it is being complicated. Book is very important for you. As we know that on this era, many ways to get whatever you want. Likewise word says, ways to reach Chinese's country. Therefore this Invisible Sex, The can make you truly feel more interested to read.
